

Leadership needed – Callie Roos

What is the leadership needed for institutions to become living examples of what is possible in the face of accelerating complexity and high turbulence?

Authentic leaders believe there is an underlying intelligence within the universe which is capable of guiding us and preparing us for the future we must create. They combine their cognitive understanding of the world around them with a strong sense of possibility. The possibility of actualizing hidden potential lying dormant in the universe, a view that carries with it the power to change the world as we know it.

A core belief that the necessary resources to solve our problems and create our future is present within us.

The challenge is for us to work together to bring our collective knowledge, intelligence, wisdom, creativity and inner courage into play.
